The Victorian Planning & Environmental Law Association in conjunction with ratio: consultants and Rigby Cooke Lawyers presents

Is planning getting in the way of good urban design?

It's the age-old debate about whether planning and its inherent mandate to control development gets in the way of good urban design. Does planning regulation make our cities too boring and prescriptive or would letting the market dictate its own built form result in a better and more vibrant city ala Barcelona?

Join us for a lively discussion (Q and A Style) to debate the merits of planning and its influences, both positive and negative, on the built form. This is one seminar that you don't want to miss!
